over the lazy dog.

Lauren C. Brown was one of the first fonts I created, in October of 2000. I had just begun my senior year of high school and my font obsession was in full force. This font was of my terrible high school handwriting, but somehow people liked it — it is my most popular font, to date!

The font has been updated with several more characters, including accents.

This is a DEMO version of the font.

It includes only uppercase and lowercase letters.

You can use the demo version for personal use.

My demo fonts may be distributed through any media, as long as this PDF file is included, you are not selling the fonts, and you don't claim them as your own.

Here's how to get the full version:

The full version of the font, which can be purchased very very cheaply at QuickBrownFoxFonts.com, also contains numbers, most punctuation, most accent characters, and many symbols. You can view the full character map at QuickBrownFoxFonts.com.

Purchase of the full version entitles you to a full license of the font, with which you can use the font commercially in any project.

The full versions of the fonts may not be distributed through any media without permission from me.

Whatever you use the font for, I'd love to see what you come up with! Feel free to contact me through my website and tell me about your project.

Thank you kindly!
